T  GETHER
NORTH CENTRAL MICHIGAN COLLEGE

Global Studies incorporates elements from various disciplines, including political science, economics, sociology, anthropology, history, and geography. This multidisciplinary approach gives students a well-rounded understanding of how these fields intersect and shape global issues. By exploring the relationships between societies, economies, and cultures, students gain a holistic perspective on the world's most pressing challenges.

North Central's Global Studies program equips students to become civically engaged, culturally aware, and environmentally conscious citizens. Graduates are prepared to navigate and respond to the complex, interconnected issues of the 21st century, including climate change, globalization, human rights, and international relations. This program encourages students to think critically and act thoughtfully as they work toward solutions that have a positive global impact.

Whether you're passionate about social justice, sustainability, or international affairs, North Central's Global Studies program provides the foundation to make a difference in a world that's becoming more interconnected every day.
